Skin disease in Dogs and Cats

Your dog or cats skin is an indication of their overall health. When a skin problem occurs, your pet may respond with excessive scratching, chewing and/or licking. A wide range of causes—including external parasites, infections, allergies, metabolic problems and stress, or a combination of these may be the underlying cause of these symptoms.

Understanding that there are over 160 different skin disorders of dogs and a similar number for cats, some of which create chronic difficulties, is key in helping your veterinarian solve the issue at hand.

There are few challenges in veterinary medicine more daunting than treating a patient for a long-term skin disorder. Chronic dermatitis cases take up about 10 percent of animal hospital file folders; and these patient folders tend to be the thickest due to the multiple pages of patient history, lab test results, biopsy reports, medications and supplements. DermalPro can offer you a safe and effective solution to help with many of these disorders. Control and management can be achieved successfully in many such cases.

Antioxidants

Free radicals are formed daily which are damaging to the whole body. Antioxidants act as scavengers to prevent cell and tissue damage.

Down regulates oxidative stress, support a balanced immune system, which respond to allergens or infections.

Omega 3

Omega 3 is required for synthesis of inter cellular connecting substances. The long-chain omega-3 fatty acids (EPA) and (DHA) are important in generating bioactive lipid mediators important in helping reduce inflammation.

Probiotics

These are required to maintain a healthy gut environment where most of the body's immune system is located.
